About the Course/Training Programme:

Industrial Hygiene is an essential component of the Occupational Health Programme as well as Industrial Safety. It's chief goal, to prevent occupational diseases or injuries through recognition, evaluation, and to control all industrial workplace pollutants/stresses. Industrial hygienist plays a critical role in management of workplace hazards through comprehensive work environment monitoring. Their proactive approach to recognise, evaluate and control of workplace hazards leads to a safer and healthier environment for employees, ultimately benefiting both employees and employer.

Objectives:

Industrial hygienists play a critical role in creating safer and healthier work environments by systematically addressing various hazards like airborne contaminants, noise levels, etc. By recognising, evaluating and controlling workplace hazards, they help in reducing the incidence of work-related illnesses and injuries, which in turn leads to better health outcomes for employees.

Course Highlights:

After the training, participant will be able to understand,

- National Policy on Safety, Health and Environment at Workplace
