Personal Growth and Group Dynamics for improving Occupational Safety and Health of workers from 23rd to 25th October 2024

INTRODUCTION

Occupational safety and health (OSH) plays a crucial role for creating a productive and positive work environment. While traditional approaches to OSH often focuses on equipment, procedures, and regulations, recent studies have shown that personal growth and group dynamics play an equally vital role in enhancing workplace safety. By fostering individual awareness, emotional intelligence, effective communication, and cohesive group behavior, organizations can build a culture that naturally supports safety and health.

Personal Growth involves the continuous development of self-awareness, emotional regulation, and interpersonal skills. When workers engage in personal growth, they become more attuned to their own attitudes, behaviors and emotions which directly impact their ability to perceive risks and make sound safety decisions.

Group Dynamics refer to the patterns of interaction, communication, and relationships within a team or organization. A strong understanding of group dynamics helps create a cohesive team environment where safety is a shared priority.

To improve occupational safety and health, organizations should integrate personal growth initiatives with group dynamics strategies. Improving occupational safety and health requires more than just following rules and regulations; it demands a holistic approach that combines personal growth with effective group dynamics.
