Background

Workplace injuries cost employers billions in insurance claims, lost productivity, government fines, and lawsuits every year.

Minimizing the risk of accidents begins with your own and your management team's absolute commitment to safety as a core value of the company. This means you do more than just set safety as a priority. Rather, you aim for perfection — that is, no job-related accidents leading to injury or death.

One of the most effective steps you can take to assure safety-regulation compliance and real workplace safety is to assign every line management responsibility for a safety program and give authority and resources to make needed improvements.
