About DGFASLI & Regional Labour Institute, Kanpur

DGFASLI is an attached office of the Ministry of Labour & Employment, Government of India and serves as a technical arm to assist the Ministry in formulating national policies on occupational safety and health in factories and docks. It also advises factories on various problems concerning safety, health, efficiency and well-being of the persons at work places. Regional Labour Institute, Kanpur is one of the oldest institutes in India under DGFASLI, Govt. of India, for teaching, training and consultancy in the field of occupational safety and health. It has been functioning since 1963.

Background

Construction work involves a series of occupational risks, such as Work at Height, Excavation Work, Marine Work, Manual & Mechanical Handling of Materials, etc. which are specific to the sector. A specific approach to the occupational safety and health in the construction industry is also required as a result of the temporary character of its work place. Continuous changes of work force are also call for a specific approach to occupational and health management at the construction site, where planning, co-ordination and budgeting becomes extremely important. The risk, construction workers face largely the result of the poor knowledge and lack of supervision. Each and every construction operation should have a trained work force. In addition, the workers safety and productivity and the quality of the work can only be guaranteed if there are sufficient skilled workers, appropriate tools and equipment at a given time. One of the best ways to approach planning for construction safety is to write down the measures for hazard prevention (control measures) applicable to the particular project site. As in a construction site, sub-contracting of a job reaches to several levels. This ensures that trained and effective work force can eliminate the causes of many potential accidents at project site.
